Brief history of Braunston

Braunston-in-Rutland is a village in the county of Rutland in the East Midlands of England. Leicestershire lies on the parish's western boundary; Braunston is located roughly two miles south-west of the county town of Oakham.

The village has lots of history, with records going back to the middle ages. More recently the Cheseldenes left their mark, up until around 1700, followed by the Hanburys who maintained an interest in the village until quite recently. You can discover many references to these families as you go around the village.

We have two public houses, The Old Plough, and the 17th century Blue Ball Inn which claims to be the oldest inn in the county of Rutland.

The church, in a circular churchyard, is dedicated to All Saints.

A curious sculpted stone stands in the churchyard, at the west end of the church, close to the tower. Known as the Braunston "Goddess", it was found in about 1920 when the church doorstep needed to be replaced. When the slab was lifted this carving was revealed on the underside. There has been considerable speculation as to its age and meaning, and its original position as part of the church building, or whether it may even predate the church.

Nowadays, we have a thriving community of about 180 households, with around four hundred people.

The Beadman family have been here in Braunston since 1817, and have now reached their seventh generation. John and Connie Beadman are a font of information about village history, and are always keen to share their knowledge; check out their notice on the church notice board expressing interest in local and family history. This is quite popular with visitors to the village. Les Lickman holds a wonderful archive of local photographs; he is willing to share these and his knowledge of the development of the village over the years.

There is a free monthly newsletter which gives details of what's happening in and around Braunston. It is delivered by members of the Parish Council towards the end of each month. You can receive a copy by email if you let Andy know your email address.

Website <http://braunstoninrutland.leicestershireparishcouncils.org/>

The Braunston website is under constant review and development. The webmaster is Janet Taylor, who is always keen to incorporate new information as it arises, and to receive helpful suggestions on how to improve the site (jtaylor.braunston@gmail.com). We hope that it is becoming a useful source for people wanting to find out more about Braunston, and what goes on here.

Notice boards

We have one village notice board, next to the churchyard, and opposite the Blue Ball pub in Cedar Street. General notices of village events can be posted there. There is a section for Parish Council business which notifies dates and agenda for parish meetings.

Broadband

In Braunston you should now be able to connect to broadband at download speeds up to 75mbps; both fibre and wireless broadband were connected to the village in early 2016. All of the regular Internet Service Providers (ISPs) offer a connection to fibre (FTTC), and HERBS has a wireless broadband service which broadcasts from the Church tower.
